The International Code of Nomenclature for algae, fungi, and plants is a set of voluntary rules that govern the naming of these organisms. These rules are changed via a process that begins with the community suggesting amendments to the current Code and culminates in a meeting at which all the proposed changes are discussed, debated and voted upon, held every six years in association with an International Botanical Congress.

The most recent meeting, five days of discussions and decisions of the Nomenclature Section of the XIX International Botanical Congress, took place in Shenzhen, China in July 2017. The resulting Shenzhen Code was published in 2018. This is the official report of the proceedings of the meeting for the historical record, covering the debate and decisions taken. It conveys a true and lively picture of the event, retaining the flavour of goodwill and humour that permeated the Nomenclature Section of the Shenzhen Congress.

EXCEP'TS FROM THE GUIDELINES

Body Text. All papers must be in English, checked by a native English-speaking colleague (if author(s) is/are not native English speaker(s)). Write with precision, clarity, and economy: use the active voice and first person whenever appropriate.

Web (HTML) links. Authors may include links to other Internet resources in their article. This is especially encouraged in the reference section. When inserting a reference to a web page, please include the http:// portion of the address.

Citations within the text. Citations within the text: Before submitting the manuscript, please check each citation in the text against the References and vice versa to ensure that they match exactly. Citations in the text should be formatted as follows: Smith (1990) or (Smith et al. 1998) and (Smith et al. 2000, Brock and Gunderson 2001, Felt 2006).

References. It is important to format the references properly, because all references will be linked electronically as completely as possible to the papers cited. It is desirable to add a DOI (digital object identifier) number for either the full-text or title and abstract of the article as an addition to traditional volume and page numbers. If a DOI is lacking, it is recommended to add a link to any online source of an article. Please use the following style for the reference list:

Accepted Papers: Same as above, but “in press” appears instead the year in parentheses.
